

MOD. V - EDUCATION AND GENDER

Course Title: Child labour & Forced labour

Instructor:

Maria Gabriella Breglia is researcher at the Fundamentals Branch (ILO) and a research fellow at the Italian Centre for International Development (ICID – University of Rome Tor Vergata). She received a BA in Political Sciences from the University of Turin and a Master in International Economics and Development Cooperation from the Centre for Economic and International Studies (CEIS) of the University of Rome Tor Vergata.

Her research focuses on child labour and forced labour at the global and at the national level and aims at identifying a comprehensive response to these phenomena on the basis of rigorous evidence. Her research involves reinforcing the capacity of national counterparts in developing research on child labour and forced labour, aiming at ensuring the sustainability of research efforts.

Course Description:

The course will provide students with basic knowledge on child labour and forced labour. Starting with concepts and definitions based on international standards, the course will provide students with an understanding of the magnitude and of the characteristics these phenomena both at the global level and in selected countries. Based on the existing evidence, the root causes of child labour and forced labour will be discussed along with policy options to address them.
